Press Release

11 February 2008

National Flood Forum Awareness Day

The National Flood Forum is a community-based network set up by people who have experienced the trauma of flooding and subsequent distress, they are a registered charity. The NFF offered help and advice in the immediate aftermath of last summer's flooding and they continue to do so. They also promote formation of "community led flood action groups" to encourage the affected community and multi-agency partnerships to work together. They recently held an Awareness Day at Portcullis House in London to raise awareness amongst MPs who have constituents at risk of flooding.

Paddy Tipping MP for Sherwood met the group and said:

"I was pleased to attend the reception of the National Flood Forum. I have worked closely with the Flood Forum. The National Flood Forum has worked hard with residents in villages along the River Trent that have experienced floods."
